

Give Your Students Industry-Ready Skills Employers Are Looking For

Everybody knows academic knowledge can only take you so far. Sooner or later you need to follow through with some real world practical experience.

How do you convince an employer to invest in professional development when students don't have much experience?

Your students have studied hard, they understand the profession and are willing to work hard and learn what they need to learn.

Which is where getting practical training while they're completing their studies can make a big difference to your students.

The Estate Master University Partnership Program offers the following benefits to students:

"Last April, one was awarded the Dean's Award for Excellence in Teaching in Undergraduate Studies for developing and leading PAS in Semester 2 2010.

But really from my point of view, the unwavering support that EM gave, Daniel's guest lecture and indeed the involvement of the other Industry guest lecturers were absolutely vital to the subject's success. Indeed, comments made by the students on their Students Evaluations Score sheets endorsed this view."
